Young Takes Trophy

The annual Lewiston DECA football game ended in glory for Rick Young's classes, but for both it ultimately ended with an Arby's beef sandwich. Each year, the two Lewiston High School marketing teachers, Rick Young and Sindy Mathewson, and their classes, compete for the DECA bowl trophy. Last year, the two classes ended in a tie, and the previous year Young took back the trophy with a final score of 21 to 7. After the game, DECA students drove to the local Arby's for a free beef sandwich and small soft drink complements of the DECA advisors.

Bad News for Local DECA Students

Lewiston and their neighbors, Clarkston, are at competition in everything from football to even DECA, but as for this year one of those competitions might be missing. Not the football game, or Golden Throne, our annual basketball game, but the DECA competition. Normally the Bengals and Bantams fight for the title of who can beat the other school with their knowledge in marketing and business. But this year the title may be unknown because it is not sure if the Lewiston-Clarkston

DECA competition will be held. If in fact the competition is not held, another competition will be held within the Lewiston DECA chapter so that the students will be prepared for state, and eventually nationals.

Mattewson Pays for Pizza

This year, Rick Young's marketing classes beat the other marketing class, taught by Cindy Mattewson, in the annual Lewiston DECA Pizza Challenge. The rules are that each DECA member competes in class and after school in their various events and the scores are combined and compared between classes. The loser has to pay for the pizza,

Mattewson's class tests their skills which is served after everyone has competed. Last year, both classes tied and the cost was split. Fortunately for Mr. Young's class this year, they won 25 to 24.

Students In Nashville

The International DECA Conference was held this year in Nashville, Tennessee. Lewiston had thirty-two students attend. Out of those thirty-two, three students, Ellen Hollingshed, Kate Photo, Jordan Hess made it to the finals. Jordan Hess made it to the top ten.
